

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION

IN THE CAPITAL MARKETS

A TRIPLE-A SUPRANATIONAL ISSUER

In 2018, IDA issued bonds in the capital markets for the first time in its 60-year history, allowing IDA to expand the scale and delivery of its development activities and make more efficient use of scarce development resources. IDA has joined IBRD and IFC as the third member of the World Bank Group to issue bonds.

To complement its funding strategy, in 2019, the IDA Bills Program was introduced to offer investors short-term liquid instruments to invest in and support IDA's mission.

GROWING PROGRAM

IDA has been expanding its investor base and building yield curves in various markets. The bonds offer investors unique opportunities to support development in countries where it is needed most.

A PREMIER CREDIT

IDA's strong credit reflects prudent financial management, a diversified loan portfolio, and strong member support. As a member of the World Bank Group, IDA's funding program, liquidity investments, capital adequacy, and credit and market risks are managed by the same experienced teams that manage IBRD's financial position.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT IDA SEC REGISTRATION EXEMPTION

Are IDA securities exempt from SEC registration?

Effective March 6, 2026, securities issued or guaranteed by the International Development Association are "exempted securities" within the meaning of Section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 and Section 3(a)(12) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (see Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2026 HR 7148).

What does IDA issuing SEC exempted securities mean?

Does it still report to the SEC?

IDA can legally offer and sell its securities without registering its securities with the SEC or relying on other common exemptions from registration. IDA expects to file with the SEC (i) unaudited quarterly financial statements, (ii) an annual audited financial statement, and (iii) an annual report, once the SEC has issued relevant regulations in this regard. IDA's financial statements and annual reports are currently publicly available (weblink).

Will IDA's documentation and Global Debt Issuance Facility (GDIF) change?

Yes, the IDA GDIF prospectus and other offering documents have been updated to reflect the "exempted securities" status. They are posted here (weblink).

Is IDA creating a short-term Discount Notes program?

Yes, following the securities exemption, this is now in progress. Funding levels will be posted on Bloomberg similar to IBRD Discount Notes.

What about IDA securities issued prior to the March 6, 2026?

Are they exempted securities?

Yes, as a matter of U.S. federal securities law, the new exemption applies to "any securities" issued by IDA without regard to their date of issue.

Do you expect changes to IDA's investor base?

Yes, prior to the exemption, IDA bonds were only offered in the United States to qualified institutional investors. IDA is actively working to educate investor groups about the current status of IDA securities.
