PROSPECTS FOR DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

MINUTES

Attendance:

Messrs. Karaosmanoglu (Chairman), Adler, J., Avramovic, Burney, de Azcarate, Dellalfar, Duloy, Hablutzel, Hasan, P., Holsen, Mrs. Hughes, Messrs. Laursen, Meo, Sachse, Shilling, Streeten, van der Tak, Waide, Willoughby, Wright, E.P., Yudelman, Burki (Secretary)

1. A staff review of the paper, "Prospects for Developing Countries," prepared by the Economic Analysis and Projections Department, was held on Friday, June 10, 1977.
2. The discussion focused on the quite optimistic tone of the paper as compared with Prospects 1976, and it was argued by several speakers that perhaps there was a tendency for these papers to be unduly influenced by developments in the preceding year.
3. Most participants, however, agreed that there was in fact some grounds for optimism although the paper was not quite convincing in this respect. But others questioned whether the optimism could be sustained, particularly for the low-income countries, and drew attention to the inconsistency between the prospects for these countries as described in the paper and those described in the President's annual speeches to the Board of Governors in recent years. The paper did not pay adequate attention to the actions that must be taken by the developed countries. It was argued that the favorable development in 1976 was both unexpected and not fully understood and could not therefore justify the projection of a favorable development through the next decade.
4. On the other hand, it was explained that the base case numerical projections did not differ significantly from those of last year. What did differ was the emphasis on economic policies in the developing countries and their potential for improving development over the coming decade. But there was nothing in the paper to imply a reduction in the need for external assistance as feared by some speakers.

5. In addition to the general discussion on the thrust of the paper a number of specific issues were raised. These included a possible inconsistency between the rather large balance-of-payments surplus of the OECD-countries projected for 1985 and the export growth rates projected for the developing countries. In this context the question of recycling international liquidity was discussed, and it was agreed that although such recycling had turned out in the past to be easier than expected, the paper should address the possibility of more serious problems in the future. In addition, some skepticism was voiced with respect to export projections for middle income countries and the projected decline in ICORs in South Asia.

6. A number of participants in the discussion had reservations about the usefulness of the new grouping of countries in more detailed income categories. It was not seen to improve the analysis of country differences, and it was argued that a geographical grouping would have been preferable. In particular, the characteristics of the African countries were overshadowed by South Asia in the analysis of low-income countries.

7. Finally, one speaker found the analytical approach too market-oriented. He referred to it as another step towards Chicago School type analysis.

8. It was suggested that in revising the paper, the following three points should be taken into account:

- in determining the future prospects of developing countries, it is necessary to focus on the outcome that would result from "most likely" as against the "most desirable" changes in policy parameters. It was felt that a great deal of optimism in the language of the paper flowed from using the "most desirable" changes as also the "most likely" ones without specifying the policy actions very clearly;
- the conclusions reached in the paper about the future prospects of different groups of countries should be based on an analysis that should clearly demonstrate the feasibility of changes in such variables as incremental capital output ratios, marginal savings rates, export earnings, capital flows, etc.;
- there should be greater balance in the policy advice, implicit and explicit, being given to developed and developing countries.

Bank Financing of Tea (P44G79)	DPS-EPD (Hughes/Singh)	Done	To be determined	This paper will update the 1973 Statement of Bank Policy on lending for tea, to take account of its role in rural development projects and of the continued inability to achieve an international tea agreement.
Basic Needs (B)
Sector Papers
Nutrition (P04B78)	CPS-AGR (Berg)	Done	December 29, 1978	The paper will investigate both short and long term needs; the short term needs are for identification of the extent, character and causes of existing malnutrition to guide programs; the long term needs are for research which will determine cost-effective nutritional indicators and the consequences of shortfalls from prescribed levels.
Education for Basic Needs (P05B78)	CPS-EDC (Aklilu)	Done	January 15, 1979	The paper will examine the crucial deficiencies in existing systems, suggest target populations that need special attention and recommend measures for promoting the desired education. The first draft of the paper was reviewed at the working level. It was agreed to expand the scope of the paper to make it more operational.
Shelter (P06B78)	CPS-URB (Jaycox)	December 29, 1978 (November 30, 1978)	January 31, 1979 (December 15, 1978)	The paper will extend the already considerable Bank work on housing and urban poverty. The paper will emphasize the magnitude of investment required and will indicate that a basic needs program is feasible provided a qualitative change in the perception of the problem takes place. The first draft of the paper was reviewed at the working level. Some additional work needs to be done by the authors to reflect the lessons learnt from the Bank's experience with planning the ongoing urban poverty projects. Hence, the slippage.

The paper is being slipped in order to allow for more in-depth analysis of the issues.

OFFICE MEMORANDUM

VAC
File

TO: Mr. Attila Karaosmanoglu, Acting Vice President, DPS DATE: August 31, 1976

FROM: S. J. Burki SJ

SUBJECT: Issues Paper on Rural Non-Farm Employment

1. Attached are memos from Messrs. Leiserson and Anderson of ECDER suggesting that PRC Staff Review of the paper on Non-Farm Rural Employment should be slipped by two months, from October 13 to mid-December.
2. I have reviewed very quickly the material sent to me by ECDER. They have managed to collect a good deal of background information that would be useful for producing the issues paper. Looking at the background material and the scope of the paper as defined, I am not sure that we can have a draft ready for Staff level review before four months. I am therefore inclined to slip PRC distribution to mid-February rather than have a series of slippages. Mark agrees with me.
3. Also, in order to lend operational significance to these papers, it would be useful for us to pull in Regional staff at an early stage. We benefitted a great deal from the Regional inputs with the Foodgrain paper. I suggest we get Regional involvement with this paper well before the PRC Staff Review.

OFFICE MEMORANDUM

TO: Mr. Javed Burki, EPRPP

DATE: August 31, 1976

FROM: Mark W. Leiserson, Chief, ECDER

SUBJECT: Issues Paper on Rural Non-Farm Employment

Dennis Anderson has sent to you a "zero draft" paper prepared by him and Miss Videt-Yontrakich along with copies of "case study" evidence prepared by consultants. I share his view (see attached memo) that a substantial amount of work remains to be done to pull together these materials into a finished draft issues paper for review by the staff. Therefore we would like to ask that the schedule for completion of the paper be slipped two months with the Staff Level Review set for mid-December rather than mid-October. The new schedule will have the added advantage of making it possible to take into greater account the revisions and review of the DFC Department's small industries paper whose completion date has been set back to October.

FROM: Dennis Anderson, ECDER *DA*SUBJECT: Progress on Issues Paper on Rural Nonfarm Employment

With respect to the above paper, we have now produced in draft form the following documents:

(a) An extensive review by Miss Videt-Yontrakich and myself on available evidence and studies on the subject, drawing on data from roughly 20 countries in E. Asia, S. Asia, Africa, EMEBA and Latin America. This review covers the following:-

- estimates of the extent of primary and secondary employment in nonfarm activities in rural areas and towns;
- composition and growth of employment and earnings opportunities in such activities;
- growth and concentration of such activities in rural towns;
- the demand, generated by agriculture, the rural population and outside markets for the products and services of such activities (and thus for nonfarm labor);
- supply factors: use of capital and labor, and the acquisition of skills;
- determinants of nonfarm employment and incomes, in particular, the linkages with agricultural development (the discussion is, however, somewhat sketchy here).
- discussion of policy issues.

(b) Case studies undertaken by consultants on the following:

- the experience of Iran, by Dhamija;
- on Taiwan, by Ho;
- on Latin America, by Berry;
- data on India, by Raj Krishna;
- on Sierra Leone, by Liedholm and Chuta*

August 30, 1976

- on Kenya, by Steele*
- on Policy Instruments, by Dhamija*

(*Final versions or drafts to be completed in the next two weeks).

I am sending copies of this material to Burki and Hofmeister. I believe that it will provide an excellent factual and analytical basis for the issues paper, though we still have a substantial job of pulling it together.

The work is still relatively incomplete, however, on the policy issues' side, particularly on Bank-related issues. Issues regarding (i) the importance of widening development policy to assist rural nonfarm activities, and (ii) what policy instruments are appropriate have been fairly fully discussed in Chapter IX of the paper by Miss Videt-Yontrakich and myself. But there is an important issue to be discussed of whether and how the Bank might operate in this area. So far, there has been involvement (all in the past nine months) in four rural development projects now being identified or under preparation, in N.E. Brazil, Tanzania, Bangladesh and Mexico. We need to take stock of present operations, and to assess how (for example) rural nonfarm activities might be supported in the context of Bank financed integrated rural development projects.

Broadly, therefore, I see the following tasks ahead:

- (1) Pulling the material under (a) and (b) above together, assessing the extent and importance of employment and earnings opportunities in rural nonfarm activities in different regions, and the role of these activities in the development process. A minimum of 5 man weeks is needed for this.
- (2) Discussions with CPS and the regions to clarify general development policy issues and Bank policy issues. A minimum of 2 man weeks is needed for this.

To begin the latter discussions, I would propose circulating the Chapter we have already written on Policy Issues.

Allowing for other commitments, I think we require at least another two months to produce a respectable first draft of the issues paper. The revised schedule should allow us September and October to produce this draft in time for a staff review in mid December and completion in mid January. We now have some good groundwork behind us, and I believe this two months of extra work would be well worthwhile.
