Mr. McNamara's Arrival Statement

LESOTHO

It is an honor for me to come to the mountain side of the Caledon River, and particularly fitting that our entry point is an airport named after your Prime Minister, Chief Leabua Jonathan.

Although I am spending a short time in Lesotho, I hope to learn a great deal in discussions with government leaders and by seeing development at work in Maseru and in the countryside. I have already seen something of your beautiful mountainous land as we flew in from Swaziland.

The International Development Association, an affiliate of the World Bank has been assisting the Basotho since 1966. Our first collaborative effort for road development was signed in an agreement even before your independence was proclaimed. Two other highway projects have followed as the Association and Lesotho have continued the important task of opening communications links across this mountainous country. The Second Highway credit, in 1976, included support for a labor-intensive construction unit as an experimental approach to Lesotho's employment problems. I hope to see this unit in operation during my visit here.

The Association has also been active in supporting education -- with two credits -- and agriculture through the Thaba Bosiu project, centered on Moshoeshoe's old redoubt at the Mountain of the Night, and the Basic Agricultural Services Project.

We have been involved in supporting industry through one credit to the Lesotho National Development Corporation (LNDC); a second, which will include important components to train LNDC staff and Basotho workers is likely to be approved soon. The International Finance Corporation, another Bank affiliate, has also invested in a stone-crushing operation in 1978. In total the Bank and its affiliates have provided more than $50 million to assist development in Lesotho.

LESOTHO

Topics for Discussion

1. Bank Group relations with Lesotho overall are good. The Government is looking to the Bank to play a leading role in the country's development -- in terms of advice, organizing and coordinating external assistance, and finance. While there are no serious outstanding issues, the following are important subjects of concern, both to Lesotho and ourselves, some of which undoubtedly will come up in discussions during your visit.

Absorptive Capacity

2. Lesotho's absorptive capacity overall has steadily expanded in recent years. Development programs have accelerated and financial and technical assistance from a variety of bilateral and multilateral sources has increased markedly. (For example, IDA from 1966 through 1973 made only two credits totaling $9.7 million to Lesotho. During 1975-78, IDA made seven credits for $40.5 million and another two credits totaling $10.0 million are scheduled for FY80.) Nevertheless, such expansion has greatly strained the country's technical and administrative capacity.

3. Because local high-level manpower is in short supply, Lesotho heavily relies, and will continue to rely for some time, on expatriate personnel to carry out its development programs. The Government estimates that more than 1,200 expatriates, including volunteers, will be needed during the Third Plan, about the same number as during the previous Plan period. However, there is concern that this assistance is not as effective as it should be and that greater attention should be given to systematically developing local manpower for replacing expatriates. We share this concern, particularly about the Government's capacity for economic planning and managing development. In addition to bilateral assistance, a UNDP-financed project, of which the Bank is executing agency, is supplying five experts and fellowships to the Central Planning and Development Office, estimated to cost $1.4 million over three years.

4. The proposed Third Five Year Plan, which is supposed to commence in April 1980, is ambitious -- the $617 million (1980-81 prices) public investment program in the draft Plan would more than double that of the Second Plan (1976-80). In addition, the Third Plan envisages another $242 million in food aid, expatriate personnel and fellowships, bringing the total to about $859 million.

5. A Government-held donors' conference on external assistance reviewed the draft Third Plan in November 1979. The conference, attended by more than 80 persons representing 18 governments, 14 regional and international organizations and 9 private agencies, commented particularly on: (i) the highly ambitious character of the Plan; (ii) the need to better define priorities among sectors and projects, carefully evaluating ongoing activities and choosing carefully among new programs; and (iii) the need to better think through and articulate policy issues and proposed measures for dealing with them in the critical areas of employment, agriculture, rural development and industry.
