Columbia University JJWBGSP Scholars Visit Executive Office of Japan

Four Joint Japan/World Bank Graduate Scholarship Program (JJWBGSP) recipients from Columbia University – School of International and Public Affairs visited Mr. Takahiro Tsuda, Alternate Executive Director for Japan (first right). The scholars discussed their current academic pursuits as well as how they plan to use their experiences in this program to contribute back to their home countries in the future.

JJWBGSP was launched by the Government of Japan in 1987 targeting mid-career professionals working in development fields. The program has awarded over 6,500 scholarships across 160 countries to date. Alumni of JJWBGSP continue to contribute to the economic growth and social development of their home countries as practitioners and leaders.
