<td>Implications of financial deepening for inequality and its impact on gender, poverty, and marginalization</td>
<td>8:30am - 10:00am</td>
<td>TBA</td>
<td>World Bank support for financial deepening has gone largely unquestioned, even though there is strong evidence it exacerbates inequality and poverty and has a strongly gendered impact. This session will analyze its negative developmental outcomes and propose alternatives the Bank can adopt to avoid these outcomes.</td>

The impact of digital trade on workers, civil society, and communities
Location: TBA
Abstract: Digital trade represents a new frontier in international commercial agreements that has broad and potentially negative impacts on workers, individuals’ privacy, and civil society. As jobs are digitally offshored and managed by algorithm, low-paid digital “ghost workers” are built into digital platforms, and personal information is commodified at the expense of privacy rights and democracy, it is critical to ensure an equitable regulation of international data. This session explores how civil society can tackle these challenges to workers and citizens while without hindering big data and artificial intelligence’s potential to address critical public health, environmental sustainability, and economic development needs.
Organizers: Public Services International
Co-sponsors: AFL-CIO Technology Institute, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Moderator: Patrick Woodall, Research Policy Director, AFL-CIO Tech Institute
- Panelist 1: Deborah James, Director of International Programs, Center for Economic Policy and Research
- Panelist 2: Daniel Bertossa, Assistant General Secretary, Public Services International

What's the role of international financial institutions in achieving accountability and justice for conflict-related sexual violence?
Location: TBA
Abstract: Impunity for CRSV prevents reconciliation, undermines the growth of strong institutions and reduces the likelihood of inclusive and democratic development. However, achieving accountability and justice for CRSV requires both coherent survivor-centered action across a complex landscape of actors involved in humanitarian assistance and the implementation of peace negotiations and processes; as well as the mobilization of political will - within the conflict-affected jurisdiction and among the international community. Intentionally leveraging and linking these processes to action on CRSV accountability and justice, can change the dynamics on CRSV. How do we optimize the central role that IFIs play in these processes?
Organizers: National Democratic Institute
- Moderator: Sandra Pepera, Director, Gender, Women and Democracy, National Democratic Institute
- Panelist 1: Melanne Verveer, Executive Director of the Georgetown Institute for Women, Peace and Security
- Panelist 2: World Bank (TBC)
- Panelist 3: Survivors’ Advocate from Global South (TBC)

It is time to tax wealth (IMF)
Location: TBA
Abstract: Inflation, high debt levels, recession and large fiscal deficits are amplifying inequality and extreme poverty worldwide. Countries are responding with spending cuts that will hurt the poor. However, Chile and Colombia are among the few countries taking an alternative path: taxing wealth which could bring more progressive and redistributive systems. Other countries in the world could learn from these experiences and choose alternatives to austerity in response to the crisis. This push for taxing wealth could also bring the IMF to give more impetus to progressive taxation in its advice to countries in these challenging times.
